

#WordsMatter

Think of how a child might feel when their parent is called a “criminal.” To children they are moms and dads first and forever. #WordsMatter and can signal to a child struggling with their parent’s incarceration that you are a safe space. Creating safe spaces for children of incarcerated parents can reduce stigma and negative effects of separation from a parent. Join us in using thoughtful language when speaking of and with people with criminal justice involvement and their families. Together we can change the narrative.

www.osborneny.org

New York Initiative for
Children of Incarcerated Parents

#WordsMatter

Think of how a child might feel when their parent is called a “criminal.” To children they are moms and dads first and forever. #WordsMatter and can signal to a child struggling with their parent’s incarceration that you are a safe space. Creating safe spaces for children of incarcerated parents can reduce stigma and negative effects of separation from a parent. Join us in using thoughtful language when speaking of and with people with criminal justice involvement and their families. Together we can change the narrative.

www.osborneny.org

New York Initiative for
Children of Incarcerated Parents

#WordsMatter

“

People talk about our parents in ways we wouldn't even talk about them. They do not stop being people, or parents, when they go to prison or jail, and neither should we stop treating them as such.

”

— Melissa Tanis, daughter of an incarcerated parent

Instead of “inmates” or “offenders” say...

Parent

People who are incarcerated

People who have been in conflict with the law

Instead of “felons” or “ex-cons” say...

Formerly Incarcerated Person

Returning Citizen

People with prior criminal justice involvement

Join us in changing the narrative—by listening to the children who are directly affected, celebrating their resilience, and using humanizing language when referring to people who are incarcerated.

Find more resources at: www.osborneny.org/susu

#WordsMatter

“

People talk about our parents in ways we wouldn't even talk about them. They do not stop being people, or parents, when they go to prison or jail, and neither should we stop treating them as such.

”

— Melissa Tanis, daughter of an incarcerated parent

Instead of “inmates” or “offenders” say...

Parent

People who are incarcerated

People who have been in conflict with the law

Instead of “felons” or “ex-cons” say...

Formerly Incarcerated Person

Returning Citizen

People with prior criminal justice involvement

Join us in changing the narrative—by listening to the children who are directly affected, celebrating their resilience, and using humanizing language when referring to people who are incarcerated.

Find more resources at: www.osborneny.org/susu

